

Reopening survey

Between You, Kristi Dunks, Chris Andrews and Ronda L Wery

Ronda L Wery

August 1 at 7:12am

Monica, here is the code for the re-opened survey:

Click Here to take survey

However, I'm thinking we may want to make changes based on today's reflections. We'll see , eh?

Monica Wesley

August 1 at 8:22am

I don't think we should make changes to a survey on which our site is built. It totally invalidates everything to this point and then we have no data for the website.

I haven't seen anything come through this morning on any of my emails. Have you sent your PowerPoint?

If it was a really huge file you may need to use something like www.transferbigfiles.com (Kristi had to)

Transfer Big Files Free – Send Large Files up to 1GB

Source: www.transferbigfiles.com...

Kristi Dunks

August 1 at 8:49am

Unless we can separate the new survey from the old, I agree with Monica.

Ronda L Wery

August 1 at 8:54am

I promise I'm not trying to throw in a monkey wrench and I do understand what you are saying.

We can separate the two surveys easily, and I'm not saying we have to.

This would probably be better as a topic for MOO or even our conference call, but let me just say this: Not for the sake of this particular class, but for the future of the website, we could consider treating the initial 88 responses as a pilot study.

We would then compare notes to clarify any problematic questions/terms/concepts that we think may have confused or skewed the data.

Then, with our newfound agency and skills in the realm of social networking, we could revise the survey and then recruit a much larger sample size going forward in the future.

Chris Andrews

August 1 at 9:05am

Treating the first survey as a pilot study makes sense, and is not a bad idea (as there are many ways we could improve upon it). I do think Monica & Kristi have a point--we don't want to revise the existing survey into a new version, as the data would change and old responses wouldn't mix well. A new survey, based upon and heavily revised from the old, would make much more sense.

Monica Wesley

August 1 at 9:11a

The time for changing things that severely impact the direction the website is going is now over... there I said it. :) But expanding on it later, when this semester is over... I'm open to that

Ronda L Wery

August 1 at 12:56pm

That's exactly what I intended. Sorry if I failed to convey it clearly. We are all on the same page.